Writing in the Yale News about college education and the railroad business. Edward H. Harriman said recently: "No matter how well educated a man may be, he must start in railroading at the very bottom." Yes, dear gir, at the very bottom; in a broker's office by preference, where you and Thomas Ryan started; through a banker's office, where Mr. Morgan started, or a lawyer's office, where Mr. Morgan started, or a lawyer's office, where Mr. Morgan started, or a lawyer's office, where in the former of the county grounded the learner of railroading ought to start in jail and work out, but under our present statutes so fundamental a praparation may be unnecessary.—Middletown Sun.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

Penalty of Boucher Who Stole a Bicycle.

Louis Boucher, 13 years of age a resident of the West Side, was taken to the industrial school for boys at Meriden Monday, after being found guilty of stealing a bicycle from Selectman John A. Gilbert. The machine was stolen about four weeks ago from the lobby of the town hall building, where it is usually left standing. Boucher has had the wheel secreted ever since and for awhile spent his time riding in the fields and paths below the Quinebaug mill on the Brooklyn side of the river. Young Boucher has also been connected with the stealing of a bicycle from N. A. Jordan, the sporting goods man.

THE SOLDIERS' OWN DAY. How It Was Observed in Danielson on Monday.

Bright sunshine and the bracing atmosphere of a perfect spring day were given to the veterans and the throngs that joined them in their annual Memorial day services.

The battle-tried members of McGregor post formed the procession as usual opposite their hall in the Keystone building and at two o'clock escorted by the Thirteenth company of coast artillery and St. James' band marched to the town hall where Col. D. R. Ballou delivered the address. The service was attended by a capacity adulence. The remainder of the exercises of the day were carried out as arranged, the graves of soldiers buried in Westfield and St. James' cemeteries being visited and decorated with flowers.
